Grover Cleveland has disavowed all intention of being a candidate for nomination to the presidency, and the peculiar fact in connection with the announcement is that it followed soon after the ultimatum by Vermont's Democratic "war horse," John Senter, that Cleveland wasn't wanted. Can it be that Senter's ultimatum broke the back of Cleveland's political aspirations? Richard Olney is left, however, and he appears to be satisfied.

Mirabile dictu! Here is the Rutland Evening News, a prohibition newspaper and a valiant opponent of the license law during the recent campaign, uttering a loud boast over the quality of a Rutland saloon. The News says, "Rutland never does anything in halves—in any line. It is stated that this city has the most sumptuous liquor store this side of New York and by all odds the most elaborate one that has ever been fitted up in Vermont." The News recognizes a good thing when it sees it, even if it be a saloon.

The report that the new Shamrock is showing up so much stronger than Sir Thomas' old boat is causing no little uneasiness among the American backers of the new cup defender, particularly as the latter boat is not showing herself able to beat the old Columbia so easily as the situation demands. The newest British creation in sailing vessels is certainly the best ever turned out there, and is sailing all around the old challenger for the American cup. Add to this that the Reliance, built especially for defending the cup, has already shown herself inferior to the Columbia in one race and the prospect is not very reassuring to yachtsmen over here. However, it must be borne in mind that the Columbia is no mean opponent and if the wind is light there probably is not a boat in water that can beat her. The whole uncertainty of this year's yacht races lends a good deal of spice to the coming event, and the yachting appetite is getting sharpened for the races in a manner that previous races have not demanded.

It was fortunate that the house of correction test case was placed among the first on the Supreme Court calendar. With the number of cases of second offense of intoxication that are coming in there is an imperative demand to know what disposal to make of the persons who are unfortunate enough to come into the clutches of the law for intoxication the second time. It is evident that during the early working of the new law, if it is rigidly enforced, as the Times expects it will be, there will be many more convictions for a second offense of intoxication. What to do with the convicted parties in the present state of uncertainty is a matter that is troubling the city judges and justices of the peace throughout the state. There is no precedent to follow except it be the precedent established under the old prohibitory law. The house of correction was the ultimate goal for all such convicted people under the old law, and it would seem that the same order of commitment would continue under the new law even if the law does not specifically state where persons convicted of a second offense of intoxication shall be imprisoned.

ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned From Our Exchanges.

An 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seneca Allen of Lincoln, was found dead near the house Friday. It is thought she was killed by a fall.

The United States fish commissioner put about 2,000,000 fish in the river at Highgate yesterday morning. Two million were also placed in the lake at West Swanton.

The 60 foot barn of J. B. Hutchins in the edge of Pomfret, was burned Saturday night together with 12 tons of hay, 3 calves and about 50 hens, and farming implements.

The American Fidelity Co. voted Saturday to increase its capital stock from $100,000 to $250,000 and to extend its business to other New England States and to New York state.

T. H. Murphy, proprietor of the Sherwood house, Burlington, has brought suit against the Brunswick Balke Colender Co. of New York, for the recovery of $500 damages, which he claims to have suffered by the failure of the company to ship his bar and fixtures.

Rudyard Kipling writes from South Africa to Walter H. Childs of his great sorrow over the illness of Dr. James Conland of Brattleboro. It is expected that a cablegram informing him of the doctor's death would reach Mr. Kipling upon his arrival in London yesterday.

Alonso Starkey, aged 82, died at his home in Centerville Friday night, after an illness of several months with grip, ending in heart failure. Mr. Starkey was the oldest deputy sheriff, both as to years and service, in Windham county. He was born in Troy, N. H., January 25, 1821.

Capt. William Robertson's paper mill at Putney was burned Sunday morning, with most of its contents. The loss will be over $30,000. The fire was discovered about 8 o'clock, but owing to the shut down of the other mills the usual water supply was cut off, and there was no means of controlling the fire. The mill was one of the oldest in New England, built by the late John and William Robertson some 80 years ago.

About 250 people attended a meeting in Brattleboro Friday in the interest of the Connecticut River Power company, whose purpose is to build a dam across the Connecticut at Brattleboro. William H. Vinton presided and Charles A. Harris, for the incorporators, gave a report from the recent survey of the river between Brattleboro and Bellows Falls. It was finally decided that the incorporators should go ahead and perfect an organization with a view to advancing the project, and it is expected that the matter will be pushed with every prospect of success.

Lang's Caustic Comments.
An item has appeared stating that Andrew Lang would visit the United States this summer on his way to the tomb of Stevenson in Samoa, says the New York Mail and Express. Mr. Lang's comments are: "This is an absolutely baseless newspaper lie. If you would so far oblige me as to impart this fact to some veridical American paper, I shall be grateful." It is done.

The Trust Celestial.
[Edward Charles Pickering, who, since 1877, has been director of the astronomical observatory of Harvard university, whose work has attracted the attention of all astronomers all over the world, is planning a star gazers' trust, says a Boston special.]

What's comin' to the country, that's what we want to know.

The trusts have got us on the run from Tift to Tally Ho!

They're comin';
They're comin';
Like regiments a-drummin';
They've got the world, an' now they've set the very stars to hummin'!

They've formed the trusts celestial an' took in all the stars;
They're fencin' in the moon an' all the big canals in Mars!

They're comin';
They're comin';
Like regiments a-drummin';
They've tackled space, and now they've got the constellations hummin'!

They've got old Taurus by the horns, an' soon you'll hear him bellow;

They'll have the Great Bear dancin' like a fiddler an' frisky fiddler!

For they're comin';
They're comin';
Like forty bands a-drummin';

They've won the race and collared space an' set the stars to hummin'!
